Lactoferrin (LF) is a multifunctional glycoprotein with important roles in innate immunity. Of the four human LF paralogs, LF is the predominant protein in milk; LF2 and LF4 are also present in seminal fluid, whereas LF3 is expressed in neutrophils. Here, we identify the C1q- and C4-binding sites on LF, LF2, and LF4 by enzyme-linked immunosorbent assays and immunoblotting. LF and LF2 bind C1q and C4, and LF4 does not. The ability of human LF to interact with the other three human LF paralogs is shown for the first time. Interactions of LF2 and LF4 with C1q and C4 were not observed in ELISAs.
