Vascular malformations, arteriovenous fistulas and aneurysms are the most frequent cause of spontaneous intracerebral hemorrhage. A 71-year-old woman suffering from a giant arteriovenous malformation with intracerebral hemorrhage is reported. The patient was treated by selective embolization. In another patient, a 65-year-old woman with a cerebral hemorrhage due to a pial arteriovenous malformation, the authors discuss the relation between the pathogenetic mechanisms involved in vascular malformations and arterial hypertension. Overexpression of BMP-6 promotes proliferation and osteogenic differentiation of mouse embryonic stem cells. Bone morphogenetic proteins (BMPs) are members of the transforming growth factor beta (TGF-beta) superfamily. BMPs play critical roles in embryonic development, including mesoderm induction and skeletal morphogenesis. The effects of BMPs on the differentiation of bone cells are well established; however, their effect on embryonic stem cells (ESCs) is poorly understood. In the present study, we investigated the effect of BMP-6 on the proliferation and osteogenic differentiation of mouse ESCs. ESCs were induced to differentiate into embryoid bodies (EBs) with the serum-free suspension culture method. The proliferation and osteogenic differentiation of ESCs overexpressing BMP-6 were evaluated by cell counting and alkaline phosphatase (ALP) staining, respectively. The expressions of osteoblast differentiation markers, such as ALP, osteocalcin (OCN), and osteopontin (OPN), were determined by real-time quantitative reverse transcriptase-polymerase chain reaction (RT-PCR) and Western blot analysis. BMP-6 significantly increased the cell number and induced the osteogenic differentiation of ESCs. The expression levels of ALP, OCN, and OPN were significantly higher in
