Let's start by giving credit to one of Montreal Impact Academy's own. Shane Bowers-Rennie is one of the coaches in the system, and he recently talked about the way that the academy is structured in the 2013/14 season. After giving credit to the organization, I asked some players if they liked it how it was put together. Below are the responses from players currently with the academy. Players: Dillon Holler Odenkirk Rita Etzio "It's good. The only thing is the talent pool is really limited. You can't just take 11-14 year olds in and mold them into a team, because players are going to separate. You need to be able to have people that last and hopefully their talents can be put to good use. Every day it's been harder and harder to get games out of these guys." Gourdon "It's been great. We've had a lot of adversity, but I feel like a lot of players have had a good experience. The continuity between year one and two has been great. Players have improved a lot and the team seems to be getting better as well." Etzio "The whole group has improved as the year has gone on. I think my fitness has improved a lot. It's going to be fun to see what happens in camp." Rita "I would say it's helped us a lot, the training methods. The academy has been good in preparing us for the future. As the Academy has been doing what it's doing, the club has been doing what it's doing. I think it's going to be a hard transition, but we'll be ready for the future." Odenkirk "I think it's been pretty good. I'm learning a lot as well. When it comes to training, I feel like I'm learning a lot about the game as well." Holler
