Dewey CARSON, Appellee. No. 16561. Court of Civil Appeals of Texas, Dallas. October 30, 1961. Rehearing Denied November 21, 1961. *436 Hubert F. Humphrey, Dallas, for appellant. Henry D. Akin, Jr., of Akin & Akin, Dallas, for appellee. YOUNG, Justice. This is a suit for damages for personal injuries arising out of an automobile collision in which plaintiff was driving on an unmarked and unlit exit road from the parking lot of a place of business in Dallas. Defendant Carson was a passenger. A jury verdict in favor of plaintiff, in the amount of $3500, was rendered and approved by the trial court; and defendant has appealed on 25 points, contending the evidence to be insufficient to support the verdict, the jury's findings being so contrary to the overwhelming weight and preponderance of the evidence as to be clearly wrong and unjust. It is now well settled in this state that if a party is injured by the negligence of another, the damages may be recovered in an action of tort, and such recovery may be had whether the injury was caused by the alleged negligence of the party seeking recovery or by the alleged negligence of some third person over whom the injured party has no control. And further that the injured person, if otherwise free from contributory negligence, is not barred from recovery by the contributory negligence of the person injured. However, if the injured person, in respect to the happening of the accident, is at the time entirely at the mercy of the wrongdoer, the law will not permit him to recover damages for his injury. To this end it is now well 2d92ce491b
