I would not recommend these type of programs. I could run them without any problems on my system, but they don't improve system performance. Try to remove any of them that you don't need. Of course there is an option to restore your disk to how it was when you installed your windows. You can also remove their entries from add/remove programs and still be able to run the program. All I do is reboot and go to my computer and in the start menu I go to programs and then all of my programs are in my program files folder. Q: How can I use jest.spyOn within an imported js file? I am new to jest and am trying to spyOn.

Unfortunately, I cannot find a way to access my methods in the spyOn. Here is my code: `import * as _ from 'lodash'; describe('Test', () => { test('A', () => { const toSpy = _.isEmpty; expect(toSpy).toBeTruthy(); }); test('B', () => { const toSpy = _.isEmpty; expect(toSpy).toBeTruthy(); }); });` Here is my package.json: `{ "name": "test", "version": "1.0.0", "description": "Test", "main": "index.js", "scripts": { "test": "jest" }, "keywords": ["test"], "author": "", "license": "ISC", "dependencies": { "jest-cli": "^23.6.0", "lodash": "^4.17.4" } }` I am running jest and am getting the following error: ● Test Suite ● A TypeError: `_.isEmpty` is not a function 5 |
