Windows Tweaker is a tool to setup Windows 7, Vista and XP. It has all settings available for Windows. If some settings are missing, you can find them in the manual. Windows Tweaker works with millions of Windows systems and you don't need to be a Windows developer to use it. CPS is now the nation's most populous city, with 2.4 million residents. It will soon be home to many more residents than residents of all but a handful of U.S. cities, and it may soon be looking at a population of 5 million or more. New York is No. 6 on my list of top 100 U.S. cities, but No. 23 in terms of population. That position in a nutshell captures the conundrum that confronts the nation's No. 5 city and No. 1 city overall. CPS is now the nation's most populous city, with 2.4 million residents. It will soon be home to many more residents than residents of all but a handful of U.S. cities, and it may soon be looking at a population of 5 million or more. CPS has thus emerged as one of the nation's most important urban centers in terms of economic significance and political clout. With the exception of California, this is a much more significant achievement than San Francisco's reputation for being "cool." And it was achieved despite much of its ethnic, cultural, and social base being pushed out to the suburbs to live in private houses instead of sharing living space in compact, dense, urban neighborhoods. A generation ago, it would have seemed outlandish to imagine that the nation's No. 5 city and No. 1 city overall would be one in the same. But today's reality is just that. The Big Apple's 4.0% annual population increase is far and away the best in the nation. Based on current data, CPS could grow to more than 7 million people by 2100. (That's assuming that the rest of America is not growing at 4.0%. If not, then CPS would not grow at all, of course.) By comparison, Phoenix is projected to grow from 2.5 million people in 2050 to 5.4 million by 2100. No other city, except Cleveland, is even projected to have 1 million more people. To put this into perspective, New York's 2.4 million is the same as the population of San Francisco, Los Angeles, Phoenix, Chicago, San Diego, and Boston. And Boston

Short-term use of theophylline for prevention of pneumonia after cardiac surgery: a pilot study. Pneumonia remains a major contributor to death after cardiac surgery. Theophylline is a bronchodilator, and may be clinically indicated in the postoperative management of patients. We hypothesized that a short-term, perioperative, prophylactic use of theophylline would decrease the incidence of pneumonia after coronary artery bypass grafting. The study population was randomized into a theophylline group (n = 48) and a control group (n = 46). Patients received 600 mg of theophylline daily beginning 2 days before surgery and continuing for 4 days postoperatively. Lung function was similar at baseline and at 4 days postoperatively. The incidence of pneumonia did not differ between groups (theophylline group, 14%; control group, 11%; p = 0.65). Prophylactic treatment with 600 mg of theophylline per day beginning 2 days before surgery and continuing for 4 days does not prevent postoperative pneumonia after coronary artery bypass grafting. The scientific name for how I feel is probably the most powerful and eloquent descriptor of the situation all along: "QWERTY": "curious, wishful, escapist, reversible, changing"—again and again... like a river in spring." Oh please, where is the river? Where is the river of my life right now? I start to lose my patience with all the blame I'm stacking on my current state of being, like it's my own fault for not being the person I want to be. It seems unfair to put all the blame on myself. Even if I'd liked to be a person who could see the forest for the trees, I don't think that's realistic, not now. It's different when I start blaming myself. I can almost see things more clearly now, and the most I can
