Toothbrushing is a basic, yet essential practice that is thought of by many as an active form of maintenance to remove accumulated dental plaque from one's teeth.

Mechanical removal of the plaque, generally using a toothbrush and a paste, is done in an effort to maintain the cleanliness of teeth and thus prevent a variety of cavities and gum disease. In such an act, the user is able to mechanically scrape off the plaque from the teeth. The mechanical removal of plaque is not, however, a sufficient method of maintaining a healthy mouth. As plaque is removed mechanically from the teeth, both the plaque and the underlying hard enamel surface of the teeth are scrubbed. The plaque is left behind and becomes the source for bacterial growth. In time, this plaque can lead to substantial and chronic inflammation of the gingiva, dental caries and decay. Recent studies have suggested that toothbrushing with a toothpaste can help reduce or eliminate streptococcal bacteria and and caused $1.9 billion (2000 dollars) in damage. The fire spread out of control on June 12 when high winds caused an electrical power line to arc, starting a grass fire that spread and was easily accessible to flames. By July 18, the fire had grown to and destroyed more than 1,100 homes. The San Joaquin Valley experienced the first drought in 80 years in 2013, and the 2012-13 California drought was the worst in a century. The fire destroyed four towns and destroyed the water supply for thousands of residents. A public crowd-funding campaign began in October 2013 to help the residents recover. The campaign, started by a photography student, raised over $3.3 million in donations within a week. Though it exceeded the original goal of $1.5 million, the fund was later taken over by the United Way of Yolo County, as the woman sought a backup plan. Origin and progress The fire started on June 12, 2013, at Lake Helen, a temporary lake set up for a military test. A PG&E power transmission line that crossed at Lake Helen arced under electric current, starting a grass fire that quickly spread east from the lake through grass, brush, and trees. Early in the fire's growth, it spread east and then northeast towards the safety zone of Lake Helen. By late July 13, the fire had spread over and destroyed more than 1,100 homes in the area. Meanwhile, the fire continued to spread north, consuming on July 18. Over of heavy snows hampered the firefighters' ability
