Possible amendments are outlined in a Parliamentary Bill that was tabled by, among others, former deputy prime minister Nick Clegg. The Bill is to be considered by the Parliamentary and Constitutional Reform Committee, chaired by Tory MP Nick Boles, later this month. The Commission Each Commission has the power to apply for amendments to Acts to bring new powers, or repeal those that are no longer in force, or rectify drafting errors. Amendments, if agreed, must be considered by all the voting members of each house of Parliament, and approved by both houses. If they are agreed, they go to a referendum of the people of the United Kingdom. It is not clear how the Commission would apply for a power that would repeal or replace a
