Motion capture technology has been available in the sports industry for years. It allows for a more accurate and flexible way of analyzing and replicating sports motion. In soccer, many motion capture studies have focused on positioning data, but it's movement during turns, jogging, cutting, accelerating and decelerating that makes the game feel fluid and realistic. There's no reason why these advances could not be leveraged in this version of the game. After the release of EA Sports' Fifa 19, EA Sports' Senior Motion Capture Lead, Martin Miller, shared his thoughts on the research and development of future game engine technologies. How has FIFA 20 advanced on FIFA 19? The technology used on FIFA 20 is more evolved. For example, the technology that gives players the ability to turn and run the same speed as the ball in live matches. We are able to replicate player movement with the movement of the ball and physics. The goal of this is to get smoother turns, but it also means that if the ball is not bouncing cleanly, it will look strange. We want to replicate a clean bounce, so when the ball is in the air, it is moving exactly like it would on a real pitch. What have you done with 'player' movement, which was one of the most acclaimed features of Fifa 19? This was one of our biggest focuses on FIFA 19. We have now just evolved it more. In FIFA 19, we didn't have the ability to have the correct speed and acceleration for players in real-life. Now you have the ability to look like you are on the pitch at training or you are competing in the tournament. The control you have over movement was something that was really important to us. You can look as fast as you want, how far you want to run, and you can jump as far as you want, even though the ball is moving at a different speed than the player. What about an MVP? With regards to the MVP, we have the same concept of a real-life MVP. A player that is better in the game than people think they are. They are the king of their team, they are the leader of their team, they are the most agile, they are the most powerful and fastest. In FIFA 20, players have to pick their own level 1s and 2s. Each one is a different player. This allows for a player to pick the team that

What's new in Fifa 22:

- New Type of Player - Introducing arguably the biggest change to the game's balancing system, by shifting the focal point for player skill development away from the Goalkeeper aspect of FIFA, and more on the player's foot skill. Expect to see smaller, more agile players with strong technique, such as those located in the Flyhalf position to emerge, with the goalkeeping position becoming less important to play as a goalkeeper.
- Player Pass Movements - Catch out opponents with the new Pass Movements mechanic, where players are able to pass more than one way when passing to a teammate.
- Complete Fixtures - For the first time in FUT, every country will compete in every league in every country.
- Goalkeeper Thirst Mode - Tackle your goalkeeper or drink a health pack to recharge. The more you tackle your goalkeeper, the more willing he will be to drink. Increase your goalkeeper's thirst level by sinking opposing teams in penalties.
- Aggressive Pass Animation - Quicker and more animated passes in the passing animation have been introduced. Players will pass with their upper bodies and head to ensure balls come at a faster speed.
- Increased Player Run-Speed - Player run-speed has been increased by 4%.
- Ball Linebacks - The direction a ball is headed by its defender is adjusted when the central defender comes out to challenge the attacker.
- Ball Valve - When a player shoots from distance, the ball valve can also affect the amount of kickback on shots - the earlier the kickback starts to increase, the more successful the shot will be.
- Referee Style - Referees now have the ability to match the shape of a player's boots to help players position themselves correctly. Additionally, referees can now adjust their line of sight during free kicks.
- Zonal Interception - Run with, read, defend and challenge- a new defensive strategy for midfielders running against the opposition. Players can intercept the ball in the zonal pitch with perfect timing and speed.
- Kick-On Side - For the first time in FIFA, a kick-on side is live. A player can now kick the ball from the side when facing in a specific direction.
- Perfect Maneuver - FUT players can now use a pinpoint shot when using the Perfect Maneuver feature.
- Man in Green - A
